Former Irwindale Police Officer Sentenced to State Prison for Sexually Assaulting Woman

A former Irwindale police officer was sentenced today to nine years in state prison for sexually assaulting a woman during a routine traffic stop three years ago, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

David Paul Fraijo, 37, was taken into custody immediately after he was sentenced by Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge Ray Jurado.

Fraijo, who pleaded no contest in October to oral copulation under color of authority and sexual battery by restraint, also was ordered to register as a sex offender for life. The assault occurred on Oct. 20, 2012.

Deputy District Attorney Rosa Alarcon with the Justice System Integrity Division prosecuted the case.
